

It is important to our communications as citizens of this democracy/republic that the "lines" of communication are wide open for information exchange. If you remove or fail to enforce regulations that guarantee greater access to DSL, dial-up, broadband, cable transmission, the internet, you neglect your duty to protect commons, to protect public interest. The FCC should encourage small, local, independent, and non-profit servers to thrive. This also applies to our airwave communication frequencies, public domain. The FCC EXISTS to advocate FOR public access. Don't forget your obligations! The FCC was not established to enable Corporate profit. By charter and law, Corporations are NOT advocates or guardians for public benefit or rights.
